

Organisations new to the Web

In order to get the best from any new technology, its essential to understand what business value it is going to deliver. This is where Cognite can help. We believe that by understanding what SharePoint can do, we can greatly assist any organization looking to move to the SharePoint platform. From our experience, organizations are looking to move away from bespoke development, but want a development platform which not only provides the scalability, functional richness and resilience offered by SharePoint but more importantly provides the business experience enhancing customer and partner relationships by connecting and sharing information, and making that information accessible across the entire organization.

How We Help

By working with our clients to understand and prioritize the business drivers for their SharePoint implementation, we can help them maximize their investment. Each organization has different requirements and challenges, and as a result, we have a proven process to ensure that the focus is upon delivering business benefit right from the off set.

The first phase is Discovery, which is spent defining our customer's business requirements. This helps us to better understand what the best solution will be.

We have found that this approach makes our customers feel more comfortable with SharePoint and they are able to start tapping into its business value earlier. We are then able to effectively move to the Design, Develop and Deploy stages where we actually build out the solution and help them achieve their business value.
